The term LOOP originally referred to a string or cord that had been tied together, or an audio tape, the ends of which had been taped or glued together. In the field of management the repetition of a LOOP is a manner of dealing with uncertainty and surprises in complex situations.

For the exhibition LOOP – BURNING QUESTIONS four artists conducted an experiment over several months in the course of which they continually introduced communication loops into the virtual realm in order to explore issues around the use of online media in a critical, innovative manner. The content of the conversations was derived from the participating artists' interest in and approach to "BURNING QUESTIONS IN ART AND SOCIETY".

In the framework of the cooperative project development, issues related to authorship in co-creative processes, the use of CREATIVE COMMON GOODS as well as global and relevant local issues of our age were discussed and translated into the exhibition context.

Exhibition:

- a) At the center of the exhibition are the graphic works, objects, installations and multimedia presentations that were developed in the course of the communication process by the four artists.
- b) The documentation of the communication process through photographs, sketches and audio recordings is to provide a glimpse into the complex conditions of the virtual exchange of ideas (LOOP).
- c) The cooperatively developed "CARD GAME – BURNING ISSUES" is presented as a spatial game installation, which allows visitors to actively participate. The game consists of a cycle of 52 burning questions of our age in visual form.
